The Deficiency Bill-Confiscation Clause. To the Editor

In the deficiency bill, just come up to the senate, section 2 decrees the confiscation of genuine allowances, which only need to be applied for at the treasury to be made up and reported to congress for appropriation. The act of 1878 is all that is needed.

Low Prices! If claims are indisputable, why should they not be passed whenever they come in?
Through human infirmity, and other causes, rights will never al 1 be pleaded when they Testimonials from all who have used might be, nor can everybody be cured of implicitly trusting the government with their money. Often officers, sailors, soldiers, and other persons, are not aware that they possess lawful dues and demands. Why should they find them confiscated? Why not as well confiscate unpresented coupons or the unconfiscate unpresented coupons or the un-claimed interest in the treasury? To forever bar—strip the public creditor—just because he does not happen to present his credit, is the most surprising measure that the house has sent up to the senate for some time. Con-gress is already overburdened with private relief bills. This broad sweep of confisca-tion and repudiation would aggravate the trouble, besides placing the government in the position of prince of embezziers, it it de-clares that the mere fact of retaining a per-son's money for one year, or at farthest, five years, conters perfect title.

Dauphin vs. Gresham.

The case of M. A. Dauphin, manager of the Louisiana lottery, against Postmaster General Gresham, claiming $109,000 damages for stopping his mail, and set down for trial in the circuit court, came down for trial in the circuit cours, came up yesterday on a motion for a continuance. Messrs, Jeff, Chandler and Charles Thompson appeared for the plaintiff and Assistant Attorney General Maury for the detendant. It was shown that Mr. Dauphin, through sickness, was unable to be present, and his senior counsel, Mr. Moulton, was engaged in an important case in New York, and while they were anxious for a trial they and while they were anxious for a trial the did not want to enter upon the contest with-out being fully equipped and prepared. Judge Hagner granted a continuance to the next term despite the opposition manifested by the government.
